2. Source met Subject on 24 Nov 1965 at the concert at the Plain des Sports in Paris. Source approached the Subject after he saw that the latter did not recognize him and so he had to remind Subject of his visit to "Shchuchinsk" in Russia in 1950. Subject at once remembered Source, remarked that he was "remembered and then 'all' went smoothly". Subject was interested in that while performing in Paris, was he never alone or with other people, what was his political status, what was doing ordinary Soviet and others and "Russian" violinist Vlasyuk's performance in Paris etc.

According to subject he talked in Kiev with literary men, his friend about Tsvetayev and they all were of a very high opinion about him as a literature man. Also, of course, Kochelivets and others. Subject was only recently in West Ukraine a long time ago and was not fully aware of all the developments changes in the Ukraine. Subject expressed that Nikolai Pavlov would like to talk to KOCHELIVETS as they were old acquaintances and surely will have much to talk about.

As to Reteller-chances in the Kremlin Subject could not tell how things were developed because at that time he already was in France.
"we are here for about a month, we are convenient... DUBCHOVSKY came to Paris, he would not let him off with just impounded... he is now free... we had some representation to Vlasyuk's in Paris, and removal of Nikolai Pavlov etc."

Q. From 28 Nov to 31 Nov 1966 source saw Subject once during Vynnytsia's departure from Paris). Subject told source his apprehension about his crucially difficult situation as was reported on 28 Dec 1966.

In general Subject behaved in such a way as to indicate that his sympathies were not completely with the regime and in this respect he might make a step further, eventually. On Source's suggestion to defect Subject replied ; "Well, but how, I am married, I don't feel well . . . You want me to give up over to nationalism completely."

He wanted to have an address but not that of Zuchanski in Latin America "it was not suitable" and asked Source whether he would come to Latin America where Vynnytsia's Ensemble was supposed to perform in the second half of February/early March. (Note. According to USSR news Vynnytsia is scheduled to be in Latin America on 1-10 Feb.)

S. Subject knew about Rosenko's defection "that when there was something wrong, he was sick or something, he went to Lutsk, Rosenko's father was Minister of Shipbuilding, there probably some relatives (Lavrentius) in Lutskoiv, in Lykpoliv . . ."

According to Subject the arson in the National Library in Kiev was performed by a male employee who was a subscriber and had been reading all the publications of another female emigree. He was sentenced to 10 years imprisonment. After 5 years he was released, the disciplinary committee (the only criminal law book in Ukraine) was suspended, he was given a job which was not related to his former occupation. His wife was not allowed to leave the country.

According to Subject the rehabilitation process of the former was not finalized until the present therefore nothing about rehabilitation. Q. c
